

Family Cultural Activities

When children visit places like the zoo, art museum, or science center, they are able to see and experience things that cannot be experienced in a classroom. Teachers call this “building background knowledge.” Having strong background knowledge helps children be more successful in reading, as well as science, social studies, and other subjects. Visiting cultural sites in the St. Louis area with family and friends will increase your child’s background knowledge and create some great memories.
